Mayor La Guardia

TAMMANY has the worst mayorality mixup in its history. It is entering the primaries in New York with three candidates. While, on the other hand, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, Fusionist-reformer, arch foe of Tammany, who is running for re-election, is consolidating various powerful elements of the population. Tammany conservatives have put forward U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland, while New Deal Tammanites have put forth Grover C. Whalen, president of the World's fair, and Samuel Levy, borough president of Manhattan, another Tammanite, in running "independently" for the Democratic nomination. To cap the climax, friends of Mayor La Guardia are urging that he enter his name for the Democratic nomination also in an effort to capture three nominations—Democratic, Republican, Independent!

Marconi Dies Suddenly In Rome

HEART ATTACK ENDS LIFE OF RADIO WIZARD

Greatest Revolutionist of His Time Calls Servant and Announces End

PASSING SHOCKS WORLD

Last Hour Spent Dictating Letter To Daughter, 7, Away on Vacation

ROME, July 20 — (UP) — Guglielmo Marconi, a shy little Italian who inadvertently, by developing and perfecting radio, became the greatest revolutionist of his time, died today.

Because of him continents and nations have been brought within seconds of one another and man's voice circles the earth with the speed of light. Though a man of science and of peace, he wrought greater changes in the lives of more millions of men than Lenin, Mussolini, and the other political revolutionists of his generation.

The great man who had been honored by all nations, but was so shy that he was only a name to all except a few intimates, died of a heart attack at 3:45 a. m. (10:45 P. M. Monday EDT). He was 63 years old.

Five hours after his death Premier Benito Mussolini arrived alone at the Marconi palace in the heart of Rome, signed the visitors book, and went to the simple death chamber on the second floor where he prayed for 15 minutes.

The Vatican transmitted the news to Pope Pius at his summer palace at Castel Gandolfo. His holiness was at mass. He immediately dedicated the services to the repose of Marconi's soul.

Long Suffering
Marconi had been suffering heart attacks in increasing frequency and intensity since April. He became ill yesterday afternoon and retired early. At 3 o'clock this morning he rang for his valet.

"I am very sorry," he said in a calm, polite voice, "but I am going to put you and my friends to considerable trouble. I fear my end is near. Will you please inform my wife?"

Mrs. Marconi was at Viareggio where she was vacationing. Notified by telephone, she started at once for Rome by automobile, arriving at 7 a. m. The servant also summoned Marconi's friends, scientific collaborators, and a doctor. He died soon after the physician arrived.

BOY PULLS TAIL OF LION; DAD DRAWS $5 FINE

NEW YORK, July 20 — (UP) — Seven-year-old Gabriel Klein pulled the tail of a full-grown lion in the Bronx Zoo but the world didn't find out about it until Gabriel's father received a suspended sentence of $5 fine or two days in jail. Gabriel admired Adam, a five-year-old lion but he became impatient because the beast wouldn't move. He climbed a guard rail grabbed the tail which hung between the bars and yanked it. The lion made a pass at the boy, but missed. A policeman served a summons on the father for violation of "chapter 17, section 19," which has something to do with exposing persons to personal danger.

Misleading Advertising Laid To Auto Makers By Trade Board

WASHINGTON, July 20 — (UP) — The federal trade commission today charged the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. with utilizing misleading advertising. Complaints were issued against the two concerns and General Motors Sales Corp.—a subsidiary of the motor manufacturer—and they were granted 20 days in which to answer the charges.

The commission asserted that the two companies—which with Chrysler Corporation manufacture the major portion of American automobiles—were reproducing pictures of expensive models in their advertisements and listing the cost price of cheap cars beside these pictures, thus creating a false impression.

The complaints said that: "Advertisements of the respondent companies contain illustrations or descriptions of motor cars, and feature, usually in large numerals, a designated F.O.B. price. The advertisements are arranged in such a manner as to create the impression that fully equipped cars so illustrated and described may be purchased at the F.O.B. or delivery point complete and ready for operation for the prices featured, or at other points for the featured prices plus the cost of transportation."

"The passenger cars so advertised are not the models usually sold for the featured price, which generally is the price charged by the respondent companies for their less expensive cars."

"It is alleged that the cars so illustrated or described cannot be purchased at retail for the featured price at the F.O.B. or delivery point, or at the ultimate destination for such price plus transportation charges, without the payment of additional charges for added equipment and accessories constituting part of what the public understands to be a complete car ready for operation."

FORD WORKERS ORDERED HELD AS RIOT RESULT

DETROIT, July 20 — (UP) — Common Pleas Judge Ralph W. Liddy today ordered eight defendants and the Ford Motor Co. held for trial in the September term of circuit court on charges of assault and battery in connection with the Ford riot of May 26.

Judge Liddy, who acted as a one-man grand jury investigating the riot, overruled the defense motion for dismissal on charges as the National Labor Relations Board approached the conclusion of its hearing into charges of Wagner act violations made against the independent motor car manufacturer.

The defendants—seven Ford employees, a former newspaper circulation worker, and the company itself—were placed under bail of $500 each.

BRADY'S GANG ROBS INDIANA BANK OF $2,000

BRAZIL, Ind., July 20 — (UP) — Three masked bandits—believed members of Al Brady's "second Dillinger" gang—robbed the First National bank of Centerpoint, near here, of $2,000 today.

Capt. Matt Leach mobilized his "Brady squad" which has been co-operating with G-men since the gang killed State Policeman Paul Minneman in escaping from a bank holdup May 25. The gang, also sought for killing an Indianapolis police sergeant, once boasted it would "make John Dillinger look like a piker."

STRIKING BOSS CLOSES PLANT; DEFIES U.A.W.A.

No Faith In Responsibility of Union To Keep Pact, Employer Declares

BLUFF, SAY ORGANIZERS

Walter Fry Declares He Is To Be Only Factory Boss; Seeks Local Union

DETROIT, July 20 — (UP) — Walter L. Fry, the nation's No. 1 sit-down striking boss, today closed his seat cover plant to 250 employees who had refused to give up their affiliation with the United Automobile Workers of America. The shut-down occurred after a stormy meeting between Fry and his employees, most of them women, in which both management and workers spoke freely.

"I would welcome a good, strong well-managed union and one that was responsible," Fry told his workers. "But I have no confidence in U. A. W.'s responsibility to keep an agreement."

He told his employees that "I would rather close the plant than recognize the U. A. W. A."

Union organizers at the meeting charged Fry with "bluffing" but the man who sat down when his employees did last February insisted he meant what he said.

Scorn Third Party

The meeting was deadlocked for several hours over the question of representation by the international union in collective bargaining. Fry said he would be willing to deal with representatives of his workers as a local, but that he would not accede to the workers' demands for U. A. W. intervention.

"If you're going to force a third party on me I'm going to do the same thing that you did to me last February—I'm going to sit down," Fry said. "I don't intend to run a plant where the U. A. W. is boss or even part boss."

His employees went on strike last winter for recognition of the union and for higher wages and shorter hours. Fry promptly ordered in a lot of food and a couch and sat down with them—in his private office.

"I'm getting a well needed rest," he explained. Only last week in a printed statement to all employees, Fry charged that there are "too many bosses trying to run Fry Products Inc." and that workers had shown "too much loss of confidence in Fry and too much placed in the U. A. W. A." He said that when the auto union had incorporated; when it could show both its financial statement and its responsibility to carry out a contract with his company. "I shall consider signing your submitted contract."

Finishing Touches Put On Normal Granary Bill

WASHINGTON, July 20 — (UP) — Congressional leaders today put the finishing touches on a new "ever normal" granary and crop control bill designed to carry out the farm program suggested by President Roosevelt.

Chairman Marvin Jones, D., Tex., of the house agriculture committee said he hoped to have the bill completed for announcement after his committee meets today. It has been discussing the measure for weeks.

Disclosure that the bill is nearly completed followed President Roosevelt's recent letter to Jones and to Chairman Ellison D. Smith, (D.), S. C., of the senate agriculture committee in which he said the present domestic allotment and soil conservation program was working well and should be used as the basis in future legislation.

Jones indicated that his new measure would carry on the soil conservation program and "improve" and possibly expand it. The bill will contain an "ever-normal" granary feature, production control through voluntary agreements with farmers and a system of permissive loans on major agricultural commodities to keep up prices, committee members said.

Persons close to the committee said that the new measure would not be so broad and expensive to the government as the program suggested by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

That program called for the ever normal granary, a system for maintaining price parity, flexible tariffs and production control. Some officials estimated that it would cost the federal government $700,000,000 annually.

Some congressional leaders doubted that final action on a new farm program could be taken before adjournment, but Speaker William B. Bankhead said he was desirous of action if possible.

GRAIN PRICES DROP HEAVILY IN CITY MART

Wheat and corn prices took heavy drops Tuesday on Circleville markets. Wheat slipped 5 cents under Monday's quotation to $1.10 per bushel. Both yellow and white corn were down 4 cents per bushel. Yellow corn was listed at $1.12 and white, $1.21.

Substitute Court Plan Proposed

Congressional Democrats Would Prevent Serious Party Division

WASHINGTON, July 20 — (UP) — Opposing forces in the court reorganization fight today agreed to a truce to permit the senate to select a new majority leader before coming to a test vote on the judiciary issue.

A group of congressional Democrats, anxious to prevent a serious party division over the supreme court issue, has proposed a new court reorganization plan to the White House, it was learned today.

The group, claiming support of more than 218 house members and widespread senate support, has urged a court substitute which eliminates the controversial requirement for retirement on account of age and the possibility of increasing the court membership.

The new proposal calls for legislation requiring a two-thirds majority of the supreme court—six of the nine members—to declare an act of congress unconstitutional. Coupled with the legislation, and put through at the present session, would be a constitutional amendment resolution calling for the same two-thirds requirement.

The amendment resolution would be designed to protect the legislation in event the supreme court holds that congress itself lacks the power to restrict the court to a two-thirds decision on legislative acts.

It was understood that Rep. Martin Dies, D., Tex., had submitted the proposal to the White House during the week-end and (Continued on Page Eight)

Voliva, leader of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church, declared the Russians flew over the earth—not around it.

Voliva said he would suspect trickery if the Russians claimed to fly over the South Pole.

COUNTER DRIVE IS STARTED BY NATIONALISTS

MADRID, July 20 — (UP) — A blast of artillery fire and airplane bombs that rocked the country south of Madrid told anxious residents of the capital today that the nationalists had opened a new counter-attack in their desperate attempt to erase gains made in the loyalist offensive.

Through the night a red glare in the sky northwest of the city told that the battle continued there, in the Brunete-Quijorna-Villanueva De La Canada Salient. It started Saturday.

This morning the nationalists attacked in full fury on the south front, along the Toledo road at a point 3 3/4 miles beyond the southern suburbs. Their objective was to knock out loyalist shock battalions who cut their communications there early in the offensive.

Government airplanes went out along the roads to the south, bombing nationalist troops hastening to the front afoot and in trucks. As they did so, nationalist scout planes appeared over Madrid, and the bark of anti-aircraft guns added to the din.

The students were armed with machineguns. While their fate was not reported, it was assumed they were annihilated by the superior force of veteran Japanese soldiers which they attacked.

Their action, the Japanese news agency said, was a signal for the Japanese army to open a formal punitive attack on the strategic railway area southwest of Peiping.

Fighting started at 2:30 p. m., 2-1/2 hours after the expiration of a Japanese ultimatum demanding a cessation of alleged sniping by Chinese troops.

Japanese troops bombarded Wanpinghsien, at the trouble center, for 30 minutes, the dispatch said, and then rested on their arms awaiting developments.

Ashville—He was just a youngster then, when he came to the James Valentine farm, up near Asbury church 40 years ago. We are telling you about O. E. Bumgarner who has lived south of Fox for the past 28 years. Said, although he is at the seventieth life peg now, he yet does plenty of work and likes it. Was in the thick of harvesting 110 acres of wheat and getting ready now to put same in ricks, doing the ricking himself. Science Battles Infantile Paralysis

NEW YORK, N. Y.—As humanitarians of two continents cheer one of the most dramatic fights medical science ever has waged to preserve a life—the case of Frederick B. Snite, Jr., infantile paralysis victim who faces seven years in an iron lung—hope that the long battle for control of the disease may be nearing success is expressed by those engaged in research.

Aided by funds from the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research, Dr. Sidney David Kramer, of the Long Island College of Medicine, reports hopeful tests for prevention of the disease with nose sprays conducted on monkeys. Members of the commission are Colonel Henry L. Doherty, chairman; Jeremiah Milbank, vice-chairman; Paul de Kruif, secretary; Edward S. Harkness, treasurer; Mrs. Nicholas Brady, John S. Burke, Edsel B. Ford, Lessing Rosenwald, and Felix M. Warburg.

During the past four years the National Birthday Ball for the President has raised more than $4,000,000 for the fight against infantile paralysis. Colonel Doherty has been national chairman of the movement since its inception.

BOY IN MISHAP KEEPS WITS AND SNARES DRIVER

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—Fourteen-year-old Eugene McGovern has all the makings of a good G-man, police here think.

Gene and his buddy, Jimmy Sieger, 13, were playing under a railroad bridge when a car came along and knocked Jimmy sprawling. The car slowed down then roared away.

Jimmy was carried away with a fractured ankle. Police were at a loss to know who the driver of the car was. But Gene stepped up with:

"The car was a green one, and here is his license number on the back of this old match cover. I scratched it on with a piece of wire."

With this information, it was easy to trace the alleged owner of the car.

Houseboat Hannah
Courtenay Savage, director of the "Houseboat Hannah" dramatic serial over WLW, formerly was a newspaper correspondent in Europe and America, who projects his keen reportorial understanding of new trends and human nature into his directing.

Well known playwright and director, Savage until recently was director of dramatics and continuity for the Columbia Broadcasting System. He has written six plays produced on Broadway and one produced in London in addition to directing many radio shows.

"Houseboat Hannah" is intended to be primarily an unusually entertaining and realistic story about a lovable, exuberant Irish mother and her family—not an Irish family toned down for radio consumption but as irrepressible and earthy as Savage found the Irish to be while living among them. For the many women of today who share a greater part of their husband's financial responsibilities, Hannah's exciting adventures in supporting her family will have a somewhat deeper significance.

Outstanding members of the large "Houseboat Hannah" cast are Henrietta Tedro, formerly of the stage and now one of radio's most colorful and talented actresses who plays the part of Hannah; Norman Gottschalk, brilliant dialect and character actor for plays Dan O'Leary, Hannah's husband, and Henry Saxe, who portrays Captain Blunt.

Gottschalk formerly was a member of the WLW dramatic staff. Following severe burns in an explosion three years ago, however, he temporarily retired from the radio.

"Houseboat Hannah" is heard at 4 p. m. EST, daily except Saturday and Sunday.

OHIO FARMERS URGED TO SOW LEGUME CROPS

Proper Summer Planting Will Protect Valuable Soil
During Winter

DODD CITES ADVANTAGES

Extension Agronomist Points
To Late August Deadline
In Local District

Farmers of Ohio are advised by D. R. Dodd, extension agronomist, Ohio State University, to take advantage of favorable weather and crop conditions this season as a means of establishing increased soil-conserving grass and legume acreages on their farms.

Not only will such seedings eventually provide livestock feed and forage crops, but Mr. Dodd pointed out, they will supply a valuable land covering for the winter months and prove of advantage to farmers who intend to participate in the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program.

While summer seedings of legumes and grasses are not generally the preferable practice, good stands can be attained on Ohio lands from which an early crop has been harvested, on land which has been summer-fallowed, on land which has produced an emergency forage crop this season, and on land which failed to produce a stand of conserving crops seeded in the spring. In hilly sections of the state, there is danger of serious erosion and the breaking of long slopes as a unit should be avoided. Such slopes are best handled in strips and on the contour.

Seedings, however, should not be later than August 15 in northern Ohio or September 1 along the Ohio in the southern part of the state. A fine firm seedbed with a good moisture content to plow depth and a good supply of available nutrients are essential. The seedbed is best completed by use of a cultipacker. The seed may then be broadcast and covered lightly. Usually, a 2-12-6 or 0-14-6 fertilizer, at the rate of 250 to 350 pounds per acre, should be used before seeding.

Cropland on which late summer or early fall seedings are made should provide excellent cover crops for the winter as well as forage, hay or pasture next year. "Winter cover crops are particularly valuable," the agronomist said, "serving to hold winter snows on the cropland, conserving moisture, reducing leaching, retarding runoff, and reducing erosion. Lime is a first essential and must be used where needed, Mr. Dodd concluded.

AT THE GRAND

"Breezing Home," the Universal picture which opens at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday, sets forth the struggle of too many sweethearts. A millionaire, owning a string of race horses, falls in love with their trainer. The same fellow has awakened the affections of a beautiful night club singer, who also owns a horse. Then the ladies meet. Fireworks! William Gargan portrays the trainer, Binne Barnes is the rich lady and Wendy Barrie is the blonde haired, canary throated singer. Feathers fly and fury flares, giving proof through the night that rage is still theirs, when the girls begin their battle for supremacy.

A crooked bookmaker, played by Alan Baxter, lifts the drama to an exciting pitch. He makes Wendy Barrie's horse lose, entangles her later so that she is ruled off the track and generally menaced the fair damsel. William Gargan gives the bookie his come-uppance and a sock in the jaw.

The climax will leave you hanging on the rail, thrilled, breathless and thoroughly entertained. "Breezing Home" is humorous, romantic and dramatic. Add salt, pepper and spice to suit your own taste — and bring your friends along.

The action blazes to life on the Santa Anita track. Other brilliant sequences take place in a modern night club, where streamlined Wendy Barrie sings "I'm Hitting the Hot Spots" and "You're in My Heart Again."

FLORIDA TREES

THIS REALLY isn't the proper time of year to talk about Florida, but a Florida man who happens to be summering in the North for business reasons breaks down resistance. Florida, he maintains has everything necessary to sustain life, and a lot of other things, growing naturally. She has, for example—

A "hot dog" tree bearing fruit which looks like a weiner and, when cooked and laid on a bun, tastes like the real Coney Island article;

A custard tree, which produces a fine grade of custard ready to eat;

A milk tree, whose green branches are filled with creamy milk;

A tree with fruit like corn, except that you throw away the kernels and eat the cob;

An egg tree, whose fruit both looks and tastes like hen-fruit;

A chewing gum tree and a sugar apple tree;

Nut trees and salad trees;

Soda fountain trees whose sap makes refreshing drinks.

That's wonderful. But how about shade trees and ice cream trees?

FARM REBELLION

APPARENTLY it isn't only public officials and engineers that are practicing sabotage against the Soviet government in Russia. Newspapers at Moscow report that wheat fields are being burned by enemies of collective farming in the Ukraine and Crimea, and large quantities of food intended for railroad workers have been spoiled by farmers.

It looks as if Stalin begins to have another peasants' rebellion on his hands as he had a few years ago. He confiscated so much farm produce that the farmers destroyed their grain and killed their livestock—after which a famine starved millions of them to death.

Maybe it is in order to "liquidate" all the rebellious farmers now.

Bolshevism, which seemed successful a year or two ago, seems to be slipping.

OUT-OF-DOORS OHIO

MAN'S interests change with the seasons. Bridge has given way to golf. Diners and dances have been usurped by baseball and boating. Motoring through the countryside has taken the place of fire-side reading.

PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN

WASHINGTON—The State Department is not shouting it from the housetops, but a new era of diplomatic cooperation with the British Empire has begun.

The initiative in this came from the British, and was inspired by Britain's Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain. At a meeting of Dominion Prime Ministers at the recent Imperial Conference, Chamberlain spoke almost with emotion in his voice of relations with the U. S. A.

He said that any alignment between the Dominions and the mother country was inconceivable without the United States. They were discussing the prospects of war in Europe and Asia.

The meeting was confidential, but friendly Dominion representatives arriving in the United States relayed the information to Secretary Hull.

Aside from this, the State Department has concrete evidence that Chamberlain's theories have been put into practice. During Baldwin's regime, U. S. officials never knew exactly what British policy was. The Foreign Office seemed always in a fog.

Now they say British policy seems more definite, while the Foreign Office never has been more cooperative. However, Chamberlain has been careful not to let his Foreign Minister, Captain Anthony Eden, a very nice but nebulous young man, handle U. S. relations. The Prime Minister handles them himself.

ILLNESS

Eighty-two-year-old Andrew W. Mellon, who was Secretary of Treasury longer than any other man in history, has been seriously ill for some weeks with a cardiac condition.

He has been confined to his Washington apartment, where he is attended by a day and night nurse. His illness has remained a very carefully guarded secret.

Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, probably will not be able to return to his work, due to a severe illness which has resulted in partial paralysis.

sorts are now in full swing. Picnics in those numerous small beauty spots of nature near the rivers and woods are common family pastimes. Swimming, sun-tanning, hiking and riding are included in the category of the many, many things to do during the warm and inviting days ahead.

Ohio affords for the moderately situated family man opportunities aplenty for outdoor entertainment. It contains the hills, the streams, the lakes, the fishing, the golf courses, the tennis courts, the outing places, all the summer sports and the scenery and the companionship that people who are better off financially tour the earth to find. The Alps, of course, are missing. And so are the Grand Canyon and the Atlantic ocean, but in some degree all the pleasures which exist anywhere else on the earth also exist in Ohio. The popular song which insisted that the good things in life are free wasn't very far from the truth. And this garden spot of the world has them, the sunshine, the pure, fresh air, the rippling brooks and the blue skies, in plenty.

RUSTLE OF SILKS

COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER 1
THE UNMUTED murmur of well-bred voices, the circumspect clatter of china and silver in expert serving hands rose and fell in concerted waves against the music of the string quartet. The latter was screened by palms on the dais at the entrance to the luncheon room at the Ritz.
 For the briefest moment there was a lull in the sound as the three appeared there and paused. There were two women and a man toward whom Fritz, now an obsequious autocrat, hurried, his whole being an expression of his desire to please.
 They stood there only a moment; the heady-eyed old lady in her ancient black, her withered throat covered with glowing pearls; the tall, bronzed young man in faultless morning attire who gave his arm to her light, arrogant touch. And the young woman with the cool, appraising eyes that were seemingly oblivious of the eyes turned upon her.
 The young woman had seen such eyes before. Had heard the same faint rising crescendo in the murmurs. She knew what they were saying. She had seen and heard in high-ceilinged, glittering rooms like this one in London, in Paris, at Monte Carlo and in Cairo.
 But it hadn't been exactly the same then. Mrs. Sutherland Sutherland, she of the ancient black and pearls, had not been her hostess then. And her eyes had not searched the room as they would soon. Because HE would not have been in Europe.

Tony Castle might be in this room at this moment.

The thought made her lift her chin a little as she followed the other two down the carpeted steps and across the floor to their table. With that slight movement, she lent a new accent to the hat that swooped low over her eyes and rose daringly on her smothered, per-colored head; and to the swinging grace of the yellow coat banded richly with silver fox. Over the velvety blackness of her suede gloves, a single wide diamond bracelet gleamed on each wrist.

"Humph!" Mrs. Sutherland Sutherland snorted at the menu. "Affection! Printing a menu in French at an American hotel! I'll take lamb stew if they've got any."

The young woman smiled. "I'd like the same thing."

"You've good sense, my dear. From all the things Mark said about you, I was afraid you couldn't have."

Mark Sutherland exchanged a quick glance with the girl. Her eyes meeting his were slightly sad.

"Who is she?" The woman in green velvet asked the woman in brown tweed.

"Mari Barat."

"The famous Parisian couturier? But, my dear, she's so young!"

"She rose quickly. Four years ago no one had ever heard of her. Now she's beginning to be a rage. She's an American, you know. I heard she was a debutante from out west somewhere. Had lots of money, went to Europe and became an overnight success."

The Green Velvet raised her eyebrows slightly. "An overnight success? She seems to have done well for herself socially. Isn't that Mark Sutherland with her?"

"It is! More importantly, that is also the dowager, Mrs. Sutherland. The girl must have been someone acceptable or the old lady wouldn't be taking her up."

.....

The old lady looked long at the crest on the cigarette case the girl held out to her.

Mari smiled. "The crest isn't mine. The case was a gift to me," she said. She didn't add that it was the gift of an Indian maharajah. She added, "I don't believe the Barretts of Brooklyn went in for crests."

"I like your Mari Barat," Mrs. Sutherland said to her grandson. She hadn't liked many of the things— or people—Mark had liked. She hadn't liked his hard riding polo, his speed flying, his motor racing, or the associates who had made his name a byword to the gossip columns as well as the sports and society pages.

The waiter held a match to Mari's cigarette so that, at first, she didn't see Tony Castle. He was at her side when she looked up. Looked up with the exact ease of cool, pleased surprise that she had rehearsed against this moment.

"Tony!" Just the right note in her cool, clipped voice as she held out her hand. "So nice to see you!" Then turning, "Mrs. Sutherland, may I present . . . ?"

"You may not!" That lady answered crisply. "I've known this boy since he was an impudent pup who wanted to paint me in fire engine red. Amanda Sutherland in red! That's why I've never been near his shop. If he has as much charm as a merchant as he had as a painter, he'd sell me a red dress." She gave him her withered hand.

He smiled on her charmingly, shrugged his beautifully tailored shoulders.

Mari aware of Mark's eyes upon her, said nothing. And saw everything that Time had done to Tony Castle, saw the new lines in his face, saw the half-mocking smile that she could never forget. And saw, with something inside her wrenching her as if the pain were not old, that seeing her was—she searched for the word and found—nothing.

"Are you going to be in America for very long?" he asked her.

"I'm sailing Friday."

"I'd like to call if you . . ."

"I'm not sure . . ." she murmured uncertainly.

"Mari is staying with me," Mrs. Sutherland answered for her.

Quickly then, his dark eyes darted from Mari to Mark who had closed his hand over Mari's which lay on the table. Mari saw him note the gesture, and if she thought she saw something in his eyes that had been there four years before, she observed that it was extinguished when they fell on her covered hand.

For an instant the smooth patina, the control to which she had schooled herself, wavered and she wanted to cry out that it meant nothing, that Mark had no right to that possessive gesture. Then she remembered herself and was all coolness and copper, and she said, "Mrs. Sutherland, it was Mr. Castle who gave me my start."

"Mark's eyes, Mark's inscrutable smile made her feel uncertain. She hurried on:

"I began my apprenticeship in his shop."

"Well, then," the old lady said, "You two must have much to say to each other. You should be very proud of her, Tony."

That Tony Castle would be proud of her, Mari did not hope. But that he would recognize her as an artist was the very purpose of her life. Mari Barat, poised in the flower of her beauty and success, was consumed with that ambition that would never be satisfied until Tony Castle recognized her. That was what he had left her with six years before when—she had been Mary Barrett then—he had let her and her love for him go out of his life.

Six years before . . .

There had been dreams then back of her deep gray eyes, milling around under the copper curls that escaped from under her shabby beret. Dreams of beauty to be created out of fabrics rich to touch, destined to float, to envelop, to enhance. These had crowded into her mind for these were to her what clay is to the sculptor, paint to the artist, words to the writer.

She had had dreams as she clutched her unwieldy portfolio closer under her arm that February night. Dreams that were extravagant, but none so fantastic as the pattern that was even then beginning to weave for her.

If Tony Castle hadn't . . .

World At A Glance

Whatever day in whatever month it may be elsewhere, it is July 6 in the senate. It's whatever date it may really happen to be in the house of representatives, however.

That is to say, when the senate gets so tired that it cannot stand it any longer, it does not adjourn until the next day. It simply takes a recess for a certain number of hours. At the recess' end it is still the same "legislative day" that it was originally. For example, if the senate recesses for 18 hours at 6 p. m. on Monday, when noon of the next calendar day arrives technically it is not Tuesday; it is just as much Monday as ever.

There are so-called "parliamentary reasons" why the senate's majority management prefers not to have it appear that the fight over supreme court reorganization is continuing for days and weeks. Hence the device of pretending that many days are the same day. It seems childish, but that is how they do it.

DIFFERENT IN HOUSE

The representatives, on the opposite hand, are not tied up in a hard knot on any piece of law-making.

Their work is all cleaned up, to the minute. There is nothing for them to do until the senate breaks its deadlock and hands down some of its bottled-up business for the representative chamber to act upon.

THEIR SYSTEM

The difference is this: The lawmakers re-convene after an adjournment.

After a recess, which supposedly is only long enough to enable them to get out for a little refreshment, they simply are called to order again.

Oh, it's hokey, but, as previously remarked, it's their system.

GARNER'S ABSENCE

As president pro tem, Senator Key Pittman of Nevada is refereeing the senatorial court fight in Vice President John N. Garner's rather mysterious absence.

Paraphrasing:

Why is Garner absent?

Yeah, various explanations are given. Nevertheless, with so vital an issue hanging fire, it is a queer time for a statesman like Garner to be vacationing in Texas.

Inevitably gossip is like this: Imaginably the senate will split evenly on the supreme court question, putting it up to the vice president to cast the deciding vote.

Now, no one believes that Garner agrees with the White House on the issue involved. And yet, how terrible it would be for him to vote against the president! Well, if he isn't here, he cannot vote either way.

PITTMAN AND McCARRAN

Anyway, Senator Pittman is doing the refereeing.

A referee is supposed to be disinterested. The fact remains that Pittman generally is regarded as pro-administration on the supreme court proposition. He is not one of the most vociferous of the "pro" senators, but he usually is classed as one of them.

An interesting feature of the mess is that his fellow Nevada solon, Senator Pat McCarran, has made a speech in the bitterest opposition to the administration's supreme court plan—or compromise.

Pittman and McCarran never have been considered very friendly. Still they are two Democrats, from the same state.

Sensor McCarran's observations were to the general effect that he was warned by the administration (specifically by Postmaster General James A. Farley) to "get into for renomination or re-election line" or he will be beaten next year for renomination or re-election. And McCarran defies the administration to try it.

In short, he calls the administration's bluff.

A bluff isn't always safe to call. It may not BE a bluff.

All the same, quite a lot of Democrats are indulging in it.

FLORIDA TREES

THIS REALLY isn't the proper time of year to talk about Florida, but a Florida man who happens to be summering in the North for business reasons breaks down resistance. Florida, he maintains has everything necessary to sustain life, and a lot of other things, growing naturally. She has, for example—

A "hot dog" tree bearing fruit which looks like a weiner and, when cooked and laid on a bun, tastes like the real Coney Island article;

A custard tree, which produces a fine grade of custard ready to eat;

A milk tree, whose green branches are filled with creamy milk;

A tree with fruit like corn, except that you throw away the kernels and eat the cob;

An egg tree, whose fruit both looks and tastes like hen-fruit;

A chewing gum tree and a sugar apple tree;

Nut trees and salad trees;

Soda fountain trees whose sap makes refreshing drinks.

That's wonderful. But how about shade trees and ice cream trees?

FARM REBELLION

APPARENTLY it isn't only public officials and engineers that are practicing sabotage against the Soviet government in Russia. Newspapers at Moscow report that wheat fields are being burned by enemies of collective farming in the Ukraine and Crimea, and large quantities of food intended for railroad workers have been spoiled by farmers.

It looks as if Stalin begins to have another peasants' rebellion on his hands as he had a few years ago. He confiscated so much farm produce that the farmers destroyed their grain and killed their livestock—after which a famine starved millions of them to death.

Maybe it is in order to "liquidate" all the rebellious farmers now.

Bolshevism, which seemed successful a year or two ago, seems to be slipping.

PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN

WASHINGTON—The State Department is not shouting it from the housetops, but a new era of diplomatic cooperation with the British Empire has begun.

The initiative in this came from the British, and was inspired by Britain's Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain. At a meeting of Dominion Prime Ministers at the recent Imperial Conference, Chamberlain spoke almost with emotion in his voice of relations with the U. S. A.

He said that any alignment between the Dominions and the mother country was inconceivable without the United States. They were discussing the prospects of war in Europe and Asia.

The meeting was confidential, but friendly Dominion representatives arriving in the United States relayed the information to Secretary Hull.

Aside from this, the State Department has concrete evidence that Chamberlain's theories have been put into practice. During Baldwin's regime, U. S. officials never knew exactly what British policy was. The Foreign Office seemed always in a fog.

Now they see British policy seems more definite, while the Foreign Office never has been more cooperative. However, Chamberlain has been careful not to let his Foreign Minister, Captain Anthony Eden, a very nice but nebulous young man, handle U. S. relations. The Prime Minister handles them himself.

ILLNESS

Eighty-two-year-old Andrew W. Mellon, who was Secretary of Treasury longer than any other man in history, has been seriously ill for some weeks with a cardiac condition.

He has been confined to his Washington apartment, where he is attended by a day and night nurse. His illness has remained a very carefully guarded secret.

Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, probably will not be able to return to his work, due to a severe illness which has resulted in partial paralysis.

sorts are now in full swing. Picnics in those numerous small beauty spots of nature near the rivers and woods are common family pastimes. Swimming, sun-tanning, hiking and riding are included in the category of the many, many things to do during the warm and inviting days ahead.

Ohio affords for the moderately situated family many opportunities aplenty for outdoor entertainment. It contains the hills, the streams, the lakes, the fishing, the golf courses, the tennis courts, the outing places, all the summer sports and the scenery and the companionship that people who are better off financially tour the earth to find. The Alps, of course, are missing. And so are the Grand Canyon and the Atlantic ocean, but in some degree all the pleasures which exist anywhere else on the earth also exist in Ohio. The popular song which insisted that the good things in life are free wasn't very far from the truth. And this garden spot of the world has them, the sunshine, the pure, fresh air, the rippling brooks and the blue skies, in plenty.

RUSTLE OF SILKS

CHAPTER 1

THE UNMUTED murmur of well-bred voices, the circumspect clatter of china and silver in expert serving hands rose and fell in concerted waves against the music of the string quartet. The latter was screened by palms on the dais at the entrance to the luncheon room at the Ritz.

For the briefest moment there was a lull in the sound as the three appeared there and paused.

There were two women and a man toward whom Fritz, now an obsequious autocrat, hurried, his whole being an expression of his desire to please.

They stood there only a moment; the beady-eyed old lady in her ancient black, her withered throat covered with glowing pearls; the tall, bronzed young man in faultless morning attire who gave his arm to her light, arrogant touch. And the young woman with the cool, appraising eyes that were seemingly oblivious of the eyes turned upon her.

The young woman had seen such eyes before. Had heard the same faint rising crescendo in the murmurs. She knew what they were saying. She had seen and heard in high-ceilinged, glittering rooms like this one in London, in Paris, at Monte Carlo and in Cairo.

But it hadn't been exactly the same then. Mrs. Sutherland Sutherland, she of the ancient black and pearls, had not been her hostess then. And her eyes had not searched the room as they would soon. Because HE would not have been in Europe.

Tony Castle might be in this room at this moment.

The thought made her lift her chin a little as she followed the other two down the carpeted steps and across the floor to their table.

With that slight movement, she lent a new accent to the hat that swooped low over her eyes and rose daintily on her smooth copper-colored head; and to the swinging grace of the yellow coat banded richly with silver fox. Over the velvety blackness of her suede gloves, a single wide diamond bracelet gleamed on each wrist.

"Humph!" Mrs. Sutherland Sutherland snorted at the menu. "Affection! Printing a menu in French at an American hotel! I'll take lamb stew if they've got any."

The young woman smiled. "I'd like the same thing."

"You've good sense, my dear. From all the things Mark said about you, I was afraid you couldn't have."

Mark Sutherland exchanged a quick glance with the girl. Her eyes meeting his were slightly sardonic.

"Who is she?" The woman in green velvet asked the woman in brown velvet.

"Mari Barat."

"The famous Parisian couturier? But, my dear, she's so young!"

"She rose quickly. Four years ago no one had ever heard of her. Now she's beginning to be a rage. She's an American, you know. I heard she was a debutante from out west somewhere. Had lots of money, went to Europe and became an overnight success."

The Green Velvet raised her eyebrows slightly. "An overnight success? She seems to have done well for herself socially. Isn't that Mark Sutherland with her?"

"It is! More importantly, that is also the dowager, Mrs. Sutherland. The girl must have been someone acceptable or the old lady wouldn't be taking her up."

The old lady looked long at the crest on the cigarette case the girl held out to her.

Mark smiled. "The crest isn't mine. The case was a gift to me," she said. She didn't add that it was the gift of an Indian maharajah. She added, "I don't believe the Barretts of Brooklyn went in for crests."

DIET AND HEALTH

Insurance Policy Phrase Causes Complications

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THIS DEPARTMENT has not previously dealt with the devious pathways of the law. But the law and health matters frequently come into juxtaposition—(there is in all medical schools a course in legal medicine which aims to teach doctors their rights, privileges and responsibilities in a constitutional or doctor's office treatment, or for diagnostic test with apparatus too cumbersome to be moved.)

There has been much discussion and difference of opinion in various courts as to the interpretation of this phrase. For instance, it may be necessary for a sick person to leave his house to go to a hospital or doctor's office for treatment, or for diagnostic test with apparatus too cumbersome to be moved.

That would probably be contested by any insurance company, but what of a patient for whom a daily drive or walk is recommended, or one who is advised to lie all day in the sun, by the beach or in the mountain air? Or suppose a patient to be advised by his physician to take an ocean voyage. It looks like a pleasant way of being sick and receiving a good income at the same time, and insurance companies have been tricked so often during the days of the depression that they are suspicious and inquisitive about such situations.

One case concerned an insured person, totally disabled, who was taken from his house twice a distance of several blocks to impart information particularly within his knowledge about a business with which he had been connected. The question arose whether he was doing work, and if so, was he totally disabled? The court held, very properly, it must seem to any sensible person, that he was not doing work, and that these trips did not contravene the clause requiring him to be continuously and necessarily confined to a house.

Courts have unanimously held that confinement in a hospital is equivalent to confinement within a house.

FINICKY APPETITES OFTEN ONE RESULT OF CONSTIPATION

When nothing tastes right, and you don't eat as you should, the trouble may be common constipation. Poor appetite is one of its symptoms. Others are headaches, listlessness and sallow complexion. Constipation is usually due to "low-bulk" meals. Serve your family Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—a generous source of "bulk."

Within the body, this food absorbs twice its weight in water, and gently exercises and sponges out the system. How much better than taking pills and drugs! ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood. Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. Three times daily, in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, etc.

Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Columbus maintained its half game lead over Minneapolis in the American Association race today, but it took a gift run from Garland Braxton, doing relief hurling duty for Indianapolis, to keep them ahead. The run Braxton forced in when he walked Dick Siebert in the ninth with the bases loaded gave the Red Birds the game, 6 to 5.

Johnny Chambers went the route for Columbus. Shaky through the early innings, he pitched shutout ball the last four and started the ninth inning rally with a double.

Minneapolis defeated Milwaukee, 5-7, coming from behind in the ninth inning. Singles by five Minneapolis batsmen and a walk by Harris produced three runs with two out.

J. Heath, Gullic and M. Heath each hit homers for Milwaukee in the eighth. Keltner also garnered a homer. Bean and Cohen hit circuit clouts for Minneapolis.

Louisville broke its 15-game losing streak behind the pitching of Harry Eisenstat. Toledo, third in league standings, lost to the cellar team. Eisenstat struck out 12 men, and allowed eight hits, three by Babe Herman.

St. Paul won from Kansas City, 13-5, in a slug-fest. Milt Boeck made a personal issue of the game and hit two homers over the left field fence on his first two times at bat to put the Blues

GREEK CHURCH IN U. S. AIDED

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—A former immigrant boy, now an oil millionaire, plans to Americanize and make understandable the Orthodox Greek church for future generations of Greek Americans.

The visionary is William Helis, consul of Greece at New Orleans, and his dream will begin to materialize in September with establishment of a special Greek-American seminary for priests at Astoria, N. Y.

Helis is a member of the Hellenic Orthodox Church of Holy Trinity at New Orleans, the oldest Greek church in this country. His interest in religious affairs was increased when he arrived at New York at the age of 16. And now that his family and all his relatives abroad are financially comfortable, he desires to remedy a situation he encountered as an immigrant boy 33 years ago.

Bewildered by Service

Bewildered in the new world when he arrived, Helis tells his experience in first attending church. He thought he would feel at home, among his own nationals. The priest mounted the dias and began the services. Helis listened to the litany, then the sermon.

It was incomprehensible to him. It was neither the warm, friendly speech of his mountainous Tropaia, in Southern Greece, nor the English of his adopted country.

It was the classic Greek of the ancients and the immigrant boy sat in stunned silence.

Last year, Helis attended a church convention at Minneapolis and succeeded in obtaining the 1937 convention for New Orleans. He has been complimented on his plans for an Americanized church by Archbishop Athenagoras, of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America.

Clergy's Needs Stressed

The archbishop wrote to Helis: "The greatest problem facing the archdiocese and that of our race in general is to secure a class of clergy with proper education and adaptability to the religious spirit and conditions prevalent in this country. This problem becomes a necessity which day by day appears more urgent and more imperative."

This procedure (of obtaining graduates from Greek theological colleges) cannot be carried on forever, for, however educated they might be, they will be foreign to the conditions of America and the demands of our new generation.

It is, therefore, indispensable that our future priests and teachers shall proceed from our new generation here, know the English language and perfect their studies in Athens or Constantinople. Thus we will secure a perfect type of Greek-American clergy."

With wealth beyond his own needs, Helis dreams of projecting his vision 50 years hence when younger and older people will attend a church whose services all understand. The church then, Helis believes, will be the center of their community life.

being killed by the scientific facts that can now be supplied.

Road failures—quite common in England—are due largely to the tremendously heavy loads roads are called upon to carry, with the result that the foundations give way.

"This," the Board's annual report says, "is not surprising when the evolution of many of the roads in this country is considered. They started first as cart-tracks, were converted to water-bound macadam, and then treated with repeated surface dressings of tar or bitumen or covered with tar macadam or concrete."

A light-colored road which does not become slippery and has a continuity of surface and no bumps is the ideal they are seeking. The difficulty is to get all the factors of the ideal down to an economic basis.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

DEMOLISHING A SQUEEZE
BREAKING up a squeeze play of the declarer usually depends upon one of the defenders making an early lead of a certain suit. In most cases that suit is the one in which the declarer will have the high card on his side plus one other card which threatens to become good because of the operations of the squeeze.

After two passes, here, South preempted with a 4-Heart bid, which was the final contract. West was fearful of doubling this contract because of the undoubted freak distribution indicated by South's bid.

At the duplicate in which this deal arose, one East defender managed to set the contract, but at the other tables the contract was easily made by a squeeze play. After the spades K and Q were cashed, a switch was made to a club, giving the opponents their book. The important thing to do now was to kill any opportunity for a squeeze, but none of the players but Mrs. Bertie D. Hilands, niece of the late Wilbur D. Whitehead, who learned about squeezes from her famous uncle, were keen enough to make the killing lead.

Most players in the East returned another club or a spade, which made things easy for South, who now ran all the hearts, squeezing West out of the diamond K. Mrs. Hilands, after cashing the club Ace, immediately returned a diamond, which killed any chance for a later squeeze, so that against her the contract was set one trick.

DAWSON-YANKEETOWN BRIDGE TO BE OPENED MIDDLE OF NEXT WEEK

OLD STRUCTURE, HIT BY AUTO, TO BE JUNKED

Temporary Span To Provide For Quick Resumption of Farm Traffic

CONSTRUCTION IS RUSHED

County Engineer Directing Grading of Road East of Dry Run

The Dawson-Yankeetown road will be opened to traffic the middle of next week if weather conditions permit work to continue on the bridge project over Dry Run.

A temporary bridge and new approaches are being constructed at the creek, about two and a half miles northwest of Williamsport.

The 75-foot steel bridge over the creek was knocked off its foundation ten days ago when struck by an automobile.

Employees of the county engineer's department are grading a roadway on the east side of the creek for a temporary bridge north of the old bridge. As soon as the temporary bridge can be erected construction of the west approach will be started.

Arrangements have not been definitely worked out for the new bridge. Assistance of WPA may be asked. The county is considering using the old bridge approaches for a new one. The road would be widened.

Construction of the temporary bridge is being rushed as swiftly as possible so as not to inconvenience farmers in the vicinity longer than necessary. Farmers have been forced to detour around the road in hauling grain.

The old bridge was so severely damaged it will be sold for junk.

Substitute Court Plan Proposed

that the substitute was being considered.

Dies, it was reported, predicted that a clear majority of the house Democrats would back such a substitute. In addition it was learned that certain house party leaders were amenable to the proposal in view of the party schism already developing in the house.

It was learned also that the White House has been asked to give its views on a direct increase of the court from nine to 11 as another possible substitute for the court plan.

This later proposal however, the White House was informed, would have less house backing than the two thirds requirement proposal, as it involved the principle of the present senate legislation calling for a direct age retirement and an increase in the court.

House leaders, it was reported, had received assurances that if the senate acts on the court bill the house judiciary committee would take direct action on the proposal within a few days.

House leaders, it was reported, had received assurances that if the senate acts on the court bill the house judiciary committee would take direct action on the proposal within a few days.

One leader forecast that within four or five days after the senate acts the judiciary committee would take a definite stand assuring early house consideration.

"A check-up of the committee shows that no effort to pigeonhole the issue and prevent it from being brought to the floor will be made," said a leader.

Meanwhile, it was learned that house leaders agreed to call a party caucus shortly after the senate acts to determine the majority's stand on the issue.

Many Democratic house members, it was explained, now opposed to the President's court program would be given an "out" if a party caucus decided to back the administration on the issue. They could explain to their constituents, it was said, that while personally opposed to court reorganization they were forced to abide by the edict of a caucus.

HEART ATTACK KILLS MARCONI

Radio Wizard Dies Suddenly At Home in Rome—World Shocked By News

sage to the only child of his second marriage, 7-year-old Elettra, who was with her mother, and whose birthday is today. He had two daughters and a son by his first marriage, the eldest of whom, Giulio, is in New York.

It was understood that the uniform he would be dressed in the body he used as president of the Royal Academy, and taken to the Academy to lie in state until the funeral.

Admired by World

Mussolini, one of the first mourners to reach the bier, was one of his most ardent admirers, but admiration of the little man transcended all creeds and all national borders. Behind the family listening to a living room radio, the orchestra before a microphone, the radio operator of a ship talking to a shore hundreds of miles away, the people of remote corners of the earth in constant and fast communication with its centers, was the shadow of the man who made practical the theories and dreams of generations of scientists.

He had been honored perhaps beyond the measure of any of the other great men of his generation. His own country had elevated him to the nobility — he was the Marchese Guglielmo Marconi — he had been a recipient of the Nobel prize in physics, he had been decorated by a score of nations, his name had been taken into many languages as a noun synonym of radio, and scores of universities had given him honorary doctorates.

First SOS

But most symbolic of all his honors, was a gold medal presented by the survivors of the Titanic, all of whom were alive because of him. Before Marconi, the survivors of ship disasters floated on wreckage until they were picked up, alive or dead, perhaps after weeks, by a ship passing by chance. The Titanic was the first great ship to flash an SOS on Marconi's wireless, and since then it has saved the lives of thousands of shipwrecked persons.

Until his last day of life, Marconi was engaged in scientific research. Since 1935 he had been experimenting with micro-waves—tiny radio impulses so small that from peak to peak they had to be measured in centimeters.

By harnessing the penetrative force of these rays, he had hoped to eliminate many physical maladjustments of which surgery now is the only remedy, and to reduce the mortality of surgery. In warfare, he had hoped to use them to halt airplane and automobile motors, and to direct wireless beam messages which could be picked up only by the intended receiver and not by an enemy.

He hoped also that they would reduce the cost of long distance commercial wireless transmission.

Other men before him had been convinced that communication without wires was possible. Marconi changed their theories to practicalities. At the age of 27, he transmitted the first wireless message across the Atlantic.

Later he helped develop the vacuum tube which made possible the wireless transmission of the human voice. He developed short wave transmission for great distances.

Friend of Edison

Marconi always regarded more highly than any of these honors,

the praise of the late Thomas Edison after he announced that he had spanned the Atlantic by wireless. Many scientists doubted, but Edison said:

"If Marconi says it is true, it is true."

Of the future development of radio, Marconi always said: "Nothing can be labeled impossible. A month's research might change everything."

Marconi was born in Bologna, April 25, 1874, the son of an Italian banker, Giuseppe Marconi, and an Anglo-Irish mother, Anna Jameson.

At an early age he showed a fondness for mathematics and science. He was educated in Florence, Bologna, Leghorn and in Great Britain.

When he was 21, Marconi was convinced that electric waves existed — that an electrical impulse could be sent through the air and be received at some distant point. At the University of Bologna he had learned of strange things called "Hertzian waves." They had manifested their presence to Edison in 1870. Edison could not understand what they were. Hertz, a German physicist, later declared they were electrical waves. Marconi had learned at Bologna how to produce these strange waves — but what they were good for he did not know.

Sends First Message

He got the idea of using these Hertzian waves for communication while serving in the Italian army signal corps. His job was to manipulate a mirror, flashing Morse code dots and dashes to other soldiers a mile or so away.

One day the sky was cloudy and the heliograph, could not function. He constructed a device to produce electrical discharges and another to receive them. He sent the signal a mile. Having demonstrated that signals could be sent for short distances, he decided they could be sent greater distances — perhaps to the ends of the earth.

He kept increasing the distance, and the power, until transmission of 120 miles was practical. He offered his invention to the Italian government. The government was not interested.

Marconi turned then to England. He sent a message across the English channel to convince the English. They had their postoffice department cooperate with him.

Spans Atlantic

Marconi then decided to send a message across the Atlantic ocean. Other scientists said it was impossible — that the curvature of the earth was a bar to wireless transmission for such a long distance. But Marconi believed that increased electrical energy and a high antennae would make it possible. He also had complete faith in the magnetic detector which made more stable and secure the reception of wireless impulses.

Marconi and his assistants built a $250,000 worth of equipment. A sending station was set up at Poldu, England, and another on the bleak shores of Newfoundland.

It was agreed to send a series of 20 S's — three dots each in the Morse code — at a certain hour each day. Marconi and his assistants

Marconi listened again the next day. The signals were received again and he announced the fact to the world.

From then on, development of radio was rapid. Other scientists, convinced communication without wires was practical, moved into the field.

The dispatches said that the Japanese army decided on action because it despaired of a peaceable settlement of the dispute with Chinese authorities.

Early in the afternoon a Japanese war plane droned high over Wanpinghsien. From it fluttered down handbills warning residents in the vicinity of the town's walls ants went to Newfoundland to receive the messages.

They took with them balloons and kites which were to carry high into the air a thin copper wire, to serve as an aerial. Marconi considered this more practical than building towers to support one.

For six days prior to December 12, 1901, Marconi had tried to fly the kites, but failed because of high winds. On the fourth day a kite was flown 600 feet into the air, but no signals were heard. On the fifth day a balloon was blown away. On the sixth day — December 12 — another kite was flown. It too was blown away. Marconi was not discouraged. He sent up another one.

At 12:30 p. m. Marconi heard three faint clicks in the telephone receiver, standing out clearly from the disturbances caused by atmospheric electricity. He heard the signals several times. Then he turned the instrument over to his assistant, G. H. Kemp, who also heard them. The Atlantic had been spanned by a 20 kilowatt spark set.

Marconi listened again the next day. The signals were received again and he announced the fact to the world.

DAWSON-YANKEETOWN BRIDGE TO BE OPENED MIDDLE OF NEXT WEEK

CONSTRUCTION IS RUSHED

County Engineer Directing Grading of Road East of Dry Run

The Dawson-Yankeetown road will be opened to traffic the middle of next week if weather conditions permit work to continue on the bridge project over Dry Run.

A temporary bridge and new approaches are being constructed at the creek, about two and a half miles northwest of Williamsport.

The 75-foot steel bridge over the creek was knocked off its foundation ten days ago when struck by an automobile.

Employees of the county engineer's department are grading a roadway on the east side of the creek for a temporary bridge north of the old bridge. As soon as the temporary bridge can be erected construction of the west approach will be started.

Arrangements have not been definitely worked out for the new bridge. Assistance of WPA may be asked. The county is considering using the old bridge approaches for a new one. The road would be widened.

Construction of the temporary bridge is being rushed as swiftly as possible so as not to inconvenience farmers in the vicinity longer than necessary. Farmers have been forced to detour around the road in hauling grain.

The old bridge was so severely damaged it will be sold for junk.

that the substitute was being considered.

Dies, it was reported, predicted that a clear majority of the house Democrats would back such a substitute. In addition it was learned that certain house party leaders were amenable to the proposal in view of the party schism already developing in the house.

It was learned also that the White House has been asked to give its views on a direct increase of the court from nine to 11 as another possible substitute for the court plan.

This later proposal however, the White House was informed, would have less house backing than the two thirds requirement proposal, as it involved the principle of the present senate legislation calling for a direct age retirement and an increase in the court.

House leaders, it was reported, had received assurances that if the senate acts on the court bill the house judiciary committee would take direct action on the proposal within a few days.

House leaders, it was reported, had received assurances that if the senate acts on the court bill the house judiciary committee would take direct action on the proposal within a few days.

One leader forecast that within four or five days after the senate acts the judiciary committee would take a definite stand assuring early house consideration.

"A check-up of the committee shows that no effort to pigeonhole the issue and prevent it from being brought to the floor will be made," said a leader.

Meanwhile, it was learned that house leaders agreed to call a party caucus shortly after the senate acts to determine the majority's stand on the issue.

Many Democratic house members, it was explained, now opposed to the President's court program would be given an "out" if a party caucus decided to back the administration on the issue.

They could explain to their constituents, it was said, that while personally opposed to court reorganization they were forced to abide by the edict of a caucus.

HEART ATTACK KILLS MARCONI

sage to the only child of his second marriage, 7-year-old Elettra, who was with her mother, and whose birthday is today. He had two daughters and a son by his first marriage, the eldest of whom, Giulio, is in New York.

It was understood that his body would be dressed in the uniform he used as president of the Royal Academy, and taken to the Academy to lie in state until the funeral.

Admired by World

Mussolini, one of the first mourners to reach the bier, was one of his most ardent admirers, but admiration of the little man transcended all creeds and all national borders. Behind the family listening to a living room radio, the orchestra before a microphone, the radio operator of a ship talking to a shore hundreds of miles away, the people of remote corners of the earth in constant and fast communication with its centers, was the shadow of the man who made practical the theories and dreams of generations of scientists.

He had been honored perhaps beyond the measure of any of the other great men of his generation. His own country had elevated him to the nobility—he was the Marchese Guglielmo Marconi—he had been a recipient of the Nobel prize in physics, he had been decorated by a score of nations, his name had been taken into many languages as a noun synonym of radio, and scores of universities had given him honorary doctorates.

First SOS

But most symbolic of all his honors, was a gold medal presented by the survivors of the "Titanic," all of whom were alive because of him. Before Marconi, the survivors of ship disasters floated on wreckage until they were picked up, alive or dead, perhaps after weeks, by a ship passing by chance. The "Titanic" was the first great ship to flash an SOS on Marconi's wireless, and since then it has saved the lives of thousands of shipwrecked persons.

Until his last day of life, Marconi was engaged in scientific research. Since 1935 he had been experimenting with micro-waves—tiny radio impulses so small that from peak to peak they had to be measured in centimeters.

By harnessing the penetrative force of these rays, he had hoped to eliminate many physical maladjustments of which surgery now is the only remedy, and to reduce the mortality of surgery. In warfare, he had hoped to use them to halt airplane and automobile motors, and to direct wireless beam messages which could be picked up only by the intended receiver and not by an enemy.

He hoped also that they would reduce the cost of long distance commercial wireless transmission.

Other men before him had been convinced that communication without wires was possible. Marconi changed their theories to practicalities. At the age of 27, he transmitted the first wireless message across the Atlantic. Later he helped develop the vacuum tube which made possible the wireless transmission of the human voice. He developed short wave transmission for great distances.

Friend of Edison

Marconi always regarded more highly than any of these honors,

the praise of the late Thomas Edison after he announced that he had spanned the Atlantic by wireless. Many scientists doubted, but Edison said:

"If Marconi says it is true, it is true."

Of the future development of radio, Marconi always said: "Nothing can be labeled impossible. A month's research might change everything."

Marconi was born in Bologna, April 25, 1874, the son of an Italian banker, Giuseppe Marconi, and an Anglo-Irish mother, Anna Jameson.

At an early age he showed a fondness for mathematics and science. He was educated in Florence, Bologna, Leghorn and in Great Britain.

When he was 21, Marconi was convinced that electric waves existed—that an electrical impulse could be sent through the air and be received at some distant point. At the University of Bologna he had learned of strange things called "Hertzian waves." They had manifested their presence to Edison in 1870. Edison could not understand what they were. Hertz, a German physicist, later declared they were electrical waves. Marconi had learned at Bologna how to produce these strange waves—but what they were good for he did not know.

Sends First Message

He got the idea of using these Hertzian waves for communication while serving in the Italian army signal corps. His job was to manipulate a mirror, flashing Morse code dots and dashes to other soldiers a mile or so away.

One day the sky was cloudy and the heliograph, could not function. He constructed a device to produce electrical discharges and another to receive them. He sent the signal a mile. Having demonstrated that signals could be sent for short distances, he decided they could be sent greater distances—perhaps to the ends of the earth.

He kept increasing the distance, and the power, until transmission of 120 miles was practical. He offered his invention to the Italian government. The government was not interested.

The handbills said that the Japanese could no longer tolerate Chinese "provocation."

At 2:30 p. m. Japanese infantry advanced from their lines along the Yungting river.

Guns in the Japanese batteries of field guns flashed and shells began exploding with a roar in the castle vicinity. Japanese sources said that at the commencement of the firing the observation towers of the old castle fell in ruins.

The Chinese batteries opened up from the lines of the 29th Chinese army and killed one Japanese soldier and wounded one.

Firing ceased after 30 minutes, reports said. But the United Press correspondent at Peiping reported that it was resumed and was continuing late in the afternoon.

Japanese authorities asserted that the Chinese were firing all day. A United Press correspondent visited the Japanese army field headquarters at Wulitien, one mile east of Wanpinghsien, immediately before the "punitive" firing started. He was told not to proceed to Wanpinghsien because of "sniping." He heard none, however.
